Our Faculty

In a rapidly changing world, emergencies and disasters are no longer rare events – they have become a part of our daily reality. In this reality, the urgent need for skilled professionals is more evident than ever – individuals with a systemic perspective, the ability to make decisions under uncertainty, and a deep desire to lead change. This is the mission of the Department of Emergency and Disaster Management - to train the next generation of leaders in the field. A generation that will know how to prepare, respond, and recover systems and communities in times of crisis.

Future Prospects for Graduates:

Our graduates hold key positions in government agencies, local authorities, healthcare organizations, emergency and rescue services, humanitarian bodies, and the private sector. They are active partners in shaping concepts, policies, and implementation – from the preparedness stage, through operational response, to recovery and learning.
